STATEHOOD.

Ex-Governor N. O. Murphy Gives His Yiews on the Subject.

PHENIX, ARIZONA, December 3 .-Editor JOURNAL-MINES.]-I have just read your editorial of the 1st inst, in regard to the work of the late statehood convention, and I feel constrained to correct a few no doubt unintentional misleading statements contained therein.

First. You dispute the amount

It is possible that the number has been overestimated, yet the census taken three years ago gave the people of Arizona, exclusive of those living on Indian reservations and Indians untaxed, and it was never claimed to be even approximately exact; be-The engineer fainted, the fireman was procured, and Harian was tied sides every well posted man will adfew back to the engine, and the con- and retied in a great network of mit that the buthern counties of tion of Cochise, very considerably

A Retrospect. General Jackson succeeded J. Q. Adams and was inaugurated on the 4th of March, 1829. Now for the first time was proclaimed the doctrine "To the victors belong the spoils," and the thing was carried out with a vengeance. No office holder from the smallest tide waiter or cross-roads postmaster to the highest office, who held positions under the former administration, but what was sammarily dismissed. The flame again and again shot | The president seemed to think that "The door was open, and the work-men were busy inside, and without rying of terrified beings through the late administration, was his enand that precedent has been generally followed since. We all know what a scramble for office is made upon the change of administration, especially when the new power is one opposed to the old. To all right thinking men such a policy is looked upon as detrimental to the general prosperity. But thanks to the gen-eral intelligence of the American was the swish of the angry flames at people and the elasticity of our form of government, it has so far withstood the strain. General Jackson was a very per culiar man. His domiant characthink of all the good things he had | teristic was courage and pluck, and the American people admire such traits. I have seen it stated that the officers of the law were afraid to arrest a criminal from the known fact that he was a deperate man and refused to be arrested and stood at bay, when General Jackson, seeing the situation, walked deliberately up to the criminal and arrested him and delivered him over to the officers of the law. General Jackson's administration was characterized by no particular event that gave any alarm even to his political enemies. His self will however was very prominent when he ordered his secretary to remove the depasits of the gov-ernment from the united bank. Mr. Harlan now keeps his abiding Duane objected to this and finally refused to do so upon the ground that neither he nor the president had the legal right so to do. Immediately off went the official head of Mr. Duane. The sage of Kinderhook, Martin Van Buren, succeeded General Jackson. He took office on the 4th of March, 1837. His administration was not characterized by anything either great or small. His personal characteristics were unlike those of his predecessor. So in 1840 General W. H. Harrison was elected over Van Buren. The victory of the whigs, although a great one, was barren of results, for President Harrison lived only one month after his inauguration,
